Kakadu, Australia

WHY TOUR HERE?

The magnificent cathedral termite mounds are one of Kakadu National Park's more unusual sights. Probably around 100 years old, this mound houses millions of grass-feeding termites with one queen producing all of the colony's eggs. The cathedral termites are known for building the largest mounds in the world. Gary Blake and Wendy Johnson spotted this one while travelling on the Kakadu highway from Jabiru to Katherine, during their extraordinary tour of Australia – you'll find their story on p26.
